

One child is the traffic controller.

The other children line up along a line with the traffic controller facing them, 10 to 20 metres away.

When the traffic controller says green light, the children skip forward.

When the traffic controller says red light, the children have to stop.

Once the children reach the traffic controller, ask another child to be the traffic controller and the other children can skip back in the other direction.